HipChat

The screenshot displays the HipChat web interface. At the top, the window title is "HipChat - Garret Heaton". The interface includes a "Lobby" tab, a user list with "Garret H." and a status indicator, and utility icons for help, settings, and navigation. A chat window shows a conversation with text such as "running an older client", "make sure the messages don't make the window pop for them", and "HipChat - Video Chat". A video chat window is overlaid on the chat, showing two participants: a man in a dark shirt and a woman in a red shirt. The video chat window has "End" and microphone icons. To the right, a user profile for "Garret Heaton" is visible, including a profile picture, status "Available", role "Co-Founder", and email address "garret@hipchat.com". The chat input area at the bottom shows a message from "Chris R." saying "Let's just video chat each other" at "2:08 PM".

QuestionPoint

The screenshot shows the QuestionPoint web interface. At the top, there is a user profile for Paula Rumbaugh (100300825) and navigation links for Home, Reset Clock, and Exit. The main header includes the QuestionPoint logo and the text "Ask a Librarian". Below this, there are logos for Support Help, LC (Library of Congress), and OCLC, with the tagline "Working on behalf of libraries". A navigation menu contains links for Questions, My Questions, Add Question, Settings, Reports, and Service History. A secondary menu shows filters for Active, New, Pending, Referred, Answered, Closed, and All. The "Active Questions" section features a search bar for "Find ID:" and a "Refresh list" button. A table lists questions with columns for ID, description, received/updated dates, and assignment status. The first question (2532324) is assigned to Carol Bonnefil. The second (2532322) is unassigned. The third (2532321) is also unassigned. The fourth (2532320) is unassigned. The fifth (2532319) is unassigned. A status bar at the bottom indicates the session will end in 29:41 minutes.

 Hey Jessie,

Copyright grants to creators a bundle of exclusive rights over their creative works, which generally include the right to reproduce, distribute, display, make adaptations, perform, sell and so on. The phrase "All Rights Reserved" is often used by owners to indicate that they reserve all of the rights granted to them under the law. When copyright expires, the work enters the public domain, and the rightsholder can no longer stop others from engaging in those activities under copyright, with the exception of moral rights reserved to creators in some jurisdictions. Creative Commons licenses offer creators a spectrum of choices between retaining all rights and relinquishing all rights (public domain), an approach we call "Some Rights Reserved."

Hopefully that answers your question!

 Jessie Prestige SATURDAY 20:09

Hi there!

I accidentally added "all rights reserved" to all the images I uploaded recently. Would you be able to do a bulk rights change for me to creative commons?

Thank you, thank you!

SEARCH THAT IS AS INTUITIVE AS IT IS INTELLIGENT

"Any sufficiently advanced technology is indistinguishable from magic." -Arthur C. Clarke.

Great search is as much an art as a science – BiblioCommons sweats the details of both. The search interface combines the ease of use that users find on Google and Amazon, with the power and precision library professionals require.

THE FOUNDATION: Flexible, Mapping Your Data from the ILS
Excellent search starts with sophisticated data mapping. BiblioCommons has developed an interpretation engine that captures the nuances of your bibliographic, authority and item records with a flexible mapping structure that intelligently combines the three according to your library's rules and practices. Audience or genre classifications can be specified with rulesets that combine collection code data from item records with MARC.
